READING IDEAS FOR WINTER

A great idea for families with children of varied reading levels is to let each child pick a book at his/her reading level. Set a designated time each night to meet and share all the stories. Each child takes the time to read his book and when the family comes together, you have a literature circle of sorts. Everyone shares the story elements from their book such as main characters, setting, plot, conflict, and resolution. Then you can have discussions comparing and contrasting the different elements of the stories. You can also discuss how each story or book would have been different if characters or events from someone else's book were to be put into their story. The important thing to remember is to READ, READ, READ!!!!
